BETTER THAN THE PAST YEAR.

The Receipts of the Maysville Postoffice Show a Still Further Increase.

Last year the city of Maysville became entitled to Free Delivery service because for the first time in her history the receipts of the Postoffice had reached $10,000 for the year ending June 30th, 1891.

It must be gratifying to every citizen to know that this year shows a still further increase, as evidenced by these comparative figures, giving the receipts for each quarter:

	1891.	1892.
September 30th.....	$2,541 44	$2,376 76
December 31st.....	2,393 85	2,494 48
March 31st.....	2,151 85	3,174 98
June 30th.....	3,066 12	2,562 19
Totals.....	$10,152 24	$10,608 41

This shows an increase of $432 17 over the last fiscal year, and ought to satisfy even the croakers that Maysville is steadily but surely forging to the front.

IN view of the fact—which is without precedent—that not a single general appropriation bill has yet been sent to the President, although the fiscal year expired day before yesterday, a joint resolution to continue the appropriations for the expenses of the Government for fifteen days of the new fiscal year was passed by both Houses of Congress yesterday and sent to the President, who signed it.

If you want anything that is obtainable, all you need to do is to advertise in THE LEDGER. Yesterday we inserted a five line item requesting a copy of the rules and regulations of the Maysville and Mason County Cemetery Company,—which by the way is a scarce document,—and before 3 o'clock two copies were brought in, one by our good friend Quincy A. A MOST DEPLORABLE ACCIDENT.

A Young Lady of Maysville Falls Into the River and Drowns.

IT OCCURRED AT MANCHESTER, OHIO.

A Sad Incident Connected With a Pleasure Excursion of Young People on the River.

A sad incident of a pleasure trip.

A young lady falls from a wharfbat and drowns with those around powerless to aid her.

Last night about 8 o'clock the little steamer Laurance left our wharf with a large crowd of ladies, gentlemen and children on board, whose minds were filled with joyful anticipations of pleasure in the trip to Manchester and return.

The party consisted of the Christian Endeavor Societies and their friends who had availed themselves of the opportunity for an evening outing on the river, an innocent amusement that has been very popular this summer.

As full of life and spirits as anyone in the gay party was Miss Emma Brennan Wood, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. James Wood.

The run of twelve miles to Manchester was made without mishap or accident, and all had enjoyed the delightful trip to their hearts content.

Arriving at Manchester it was announced that the boat would stay twenty minutes before the home journey was commenced.

The little boat was tied securely to the wharf, and about twenty of the party prepared to go on a short walk about the little town.

The doors of the wharfbat were not opened and one had to walk around the guards of the boat in order to reach the shore.

Miss Wood, with a crowd of her companions had stepped onto the wharfbat and reached the upper end, where a turn to the left is made.

The child kept on straight ahead. There was a cry of warning from some one, but it came too late. She had made the fatal step and lost her balance and fallen into the water, which is several feet deep.

The current at that point is very swift and she passed immediately under the wharfbat. There was no earthly chance to lend a helping hand. The child herself had no chance to make a struggle for her life. She made no outcry, and it is supposed she never rose to the surface.

An unknown hero of Manchester jumped into the river in an attempt to rescue her, but his efforts were unavailing.

Immediately below the wharfbat the Manchester ferryboat and a coal barge were lying, and under all of these the body must necessarily have passed before it could rise.

The body has been recovered and was brought to this city this morning.

The funeral arrangements had not been announced when THE LEDGER went to press.

Miss Emma, aged thirteen and a half years, was the youngest daughter of our esteemed citizen J. James Wood and his estimable wife, who have the heartfelt sympathy of everyone. She was a child of particularly bright disposition, and by her gentle ways and lady-like manners, had won the love of all who knew her.

OWING to the lateness of the train on which Mr. Shuler, manager of the stove works which propose to locate in this city, was a passenger, the meeting at the Council Chamber last night adjourned to meet at the same place at 8 o'clock this afternoon.

Before adjourning, however, Judge Phister was called to the chair, and W. W. Ball explained his proposition in regard to the site of the plant.

Profits in Sheep Culture.

Last August Charles L. Anderson of this county bought 96 head of sheep at $4 50 per head, or $432 in all. During the winter he sold wool and lambs to the amount of $128, and a buck for $5. On the 1st of July he sold enough lambs to realize $290 32. This makes the total sales from the flock $423 32, or within $8 72 of what the original flock cost him. He has 80 ewes and 8 lambs left, or very nearly as many as he had in the outset, which cost him, practically, but $8 72, beyond the expense of keeping, which is not very large if one has plenty of land.

Races on the Fourth.

There will be two races at the picnic to be given by the P. O. S. A. at the Fair Grounds July 4th. The following are the entries:

Rattles Camp-meeting.

These noted grounds are being improved this year more than ever. The demand for rooms is so great that the Board of Directors are having built a large cottage containing eight rooms, which will be for the accommodation of persons that desire to spend a few days at the meetings. The privileges will be let on Monday, July 4th, at 10 o'clock on the grounds.

KENTUCKY'S EMPTY TREASURY.

An Official Statement That Should Set Taxpayers to Thinking.

THE LEDGER has frequently called attention to the fact that the Treasury of Kentucky was being depleted and the taxpayers of the state unnecessarily and heavily burdened through Democratic mismanagement of state affairs.

It has not been necessary, for so these many years, for any Democratic editor to go beyond Frankfort if he was in search for material denunciatory of violated promises; yet they have sought to avoid home matters by directing their readers to what was being done elsewhere.

At last, however, comes the official statement that Kentucky has an empty Treasury, and it comes from no other source than from the Treasurer himself. Here it is:

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 1st.—State Treasurer Hale announced yesterday that no more payments could be made upon demands on the state for some time. Legislator Crow of Hartford drew out $500 of his pay in order to get married and no money was left. About one million dollars of school funds and other preferred demands will be due in November and all the money will be allowed to accumulate to meet these. It will be three months probably before payments are resumed.

In a Broadway New York street car a well dressed and fine looking man, evidently deeply under the influence of intoxicating drinks, stumbled on to the platform and stood teetering at the door, with both hands upon the jambs, while he peered into the car and, as if he could not see that there was plenty of vacant seats, inquired: "Is there a seat for me here?" Over in the corner was a large and pompous looking individual who looked as if he had never taken an intoxicating drink in his life and who seemed to be disgusted with the condition of the newcomer, who replied impatiently: "No, there are no seats here for a drunkard." The man at the door braced himself up a little as if his dignity had been insulted, choked down a hiccup and in a half maudlin way said: "Well, I am a little drunk and I may be a drunkard because I am a little drunk, but I'll get over this spree in the mornin' if I get a seat and get home. You, sir, are nothin' but a hog, and you'll nev get over that in the world." The pompous man found it convenient to leave the car at the next account of the smiles of
